

Cynthia was the teacher of my Introduction to Oceanography honors course at North Carolina State University. Her passion for the subject and her creative approach to teaching added so much to the course. While covering the basics of oceanography, Cynthia often added examples of her personal experience to the discussions as real world examples of the scientific process. She challenged me and my fellow students to be more creative in our own thought processes as well, and that made the class even more enjoyable. I would highly recommend Cynthia as a teacher.
